

A breath of Fresh Air for leaders and members

Hoosier Patriots, Inc., a non-partisan, conservative patriot educational organization periodically holds patriot leadership conferences and workshops. While directed primarily at the top two leaders in every organization, members also will benefit from these compact and concentrated conferences, held in nearby locations convenient to as many as possible.

These one-day events are fast moving with plenty of material to absorb. Visiting experts in political activism, non-profit organization operations, and more, will fill your day with information and ideas. In addition, conferences will give leaders an opportunity to exchange ideas and coordinate near-by events, long-range trips, and rallies.

“Given our very important, complicated, and difficult task, and the large number of organized groups now established, we believe there needs to be consistency, efficiency, and coordination of effort to assure improved effectiveness,” Hoosier Patriots officials said in a statement. “Simply getting officers together occasionally for an exchange of ideas and to talk about the problems we face can be extraordinarily helpful. But, we’re hopeful we can also streamline the contact between the local organizations as well. If nothing else, something has to be done to reduce the e-mail load we’re all carrying. This is not an effort by Hoosier Patriots to merge organizations. Every organization will retain its own identity and purpose.”

Here are some of the generic tasks every conference will include:

- Exchange of ideas.
- Coordination of e-mail campaigns to reduce overall individual loads.
- Simplification and networking e-mail broadcasts.
- Establish a specific direct communication between organizations to improve overall efficiency.
- Coordination of rally and event dates to avoid conflicts and improve attendance.
- Joint rallies and demonstrations.
- Establish an alternative communications network in the absence of the Internet.
